CDMS Turns 21

Celebrating two decades, CDMS offers affordable business process management solutions

Harrisburg, Pa. - July 30, 2007 - If "21" is the age of maturation, Harrisburg's CDMS has reached that milestone with success and customer satisfaction.

Since 1987, the Harrisburg-based firm has been providing business process solutions that incorporate technology and workflow so organizations can streamline high-volume processes efficiently and cost-effectively.

CDMS clients include government agencies on all levels, insurance companies, financial groups, educational systems and health care organizations.

"We know documents are critical to the way you do business,, from customer communications to human resource files, from claims to contracts," says Perry Kurlander., principal. "Implementing an entirely new management system or even retooling an existing one can be costly. But CDMS makes these processes affordable with our award-winning solutions. We address your document management needs by creating a custom-fit for your organization."

In addition to a proven track record and professional expertise, CDMS provides a high level of security for your documents and a fast turnaround time.

"Once your documents are in digital form and ready to be accessed by your employees, CDMS will work with you to ensure that each document is immediately available when it's needed," says Kurlander. "We offer follow-up training to make sure everything is running smoothly."

Over time, CDMS has evolved from an implementer to a creator of technology. The company is the originator of Abledoc software, which combines document management, business process management and records management in a single easy-to-use application.
